

Patrick Purtill serves as the Director of Legislative Affairs for the Faith & Freedom Coalition where he oversees federal legislative, regulatory and legal activities, and coordinates state-level policy activities. Patrick also serves as the Charles Evans Hughes Lecturer in Politics and Co-Director of the Washington Study Group at Colgate University.

Previously Patrick practiced law, advising corporations on formation, transactions, corporate governance, political law, and regulatory compliance issues. In the George W. Bush Administration, he spent two years in the Office of the U.S. Secretary of State as Director of New Partner Outreach for the Global AIDS Coordinator where he created a $200 million program coordinated across agencies within the federal government to support U.S. relationships with domestic and indigenous service and medical nonprofit organizations in 15 countries to deliver HIV/AIDS programming internationally. Prior to this, Patrick spent three years as Special Assistant to the U.S. Deputy Attorney General where he managed the drafting and implementation of regulatory reforms and pilot grant programs. He also served on the Attorney General's Prisoner Reentry Working Group, the President's Prisoner Reentry Initiative Group, and the Strategic Management Council's Subcommittee on Violent Crime and Gangs.

Patrick served as President and CEO of the National Council For Adoption, where he coordinated relations with more than 100 corporate member agencies worldwide, and as President and Executive Director of Washington Scholarship Fund where he oversaw a three-fold program expansion to support nearly 1,400 low-income Washington, D.C. children attending 125 private, parochial, and independent schools.

Patrick has testified before the U.S. Congress and multiple state legislatures, has been an NGO Representative to the Hague Conference on Private International Law, and has provided commentary on a host of public policy issues for national broadcasts and newspapers, including ABC's World News Tonight, NBC's Today Show, CNN, MSNBC, and USA Today, in addition to many regional and local broadcasts and newspapers.

Patrick holds a J.D. from the College of William and Mary Law School, and M.P. and B.A. degrees in political philosophy from the University of Dallas.
