

Condensed Bio:

George Hadijski (Ha-gee-ski) is currently the Director of Congressional Programming with the Congressional Management Foundation. He is responsible for the oversight and management of CMF's training and management consulting services provided to House and Senate offices, the joint training program conducted in coordination with the Government Affairs Institute at Georgetown University, co-manages parts of CMF's annual Democracy Awards, and conducts individual office consultations.

George has worked at the US House of Representatives for 27 years. He spent most of his career at the Committee on House Administration serving six different Committee Chairs. George served as the Committee's Director of Member and Committee Services and concluded his work on Capitol Hill as a Senior Advisor.

In his capacity with the Committee, George was the key advisor in the US House of Representatives on rules and regulations pertaining to using official resources. George provided direct guidance to Committee Chairs, Members and staff of the House leadership, committees, congressional offices, and officers of the House.

Full Bio:

George Hadijski

DIRECTOR OF CONGRESSIONAL PROGRAMMING

George is responsible for the oversight and management of CMF's training and management consulting services provided to House and Senate offices, the joint training program conducted in coordination with the Government Affairs Institute at Georgetown University, co-management of CMF's annual Democracy Awards, and individual office consultations.

George has worked at the US House of Representatives for 27 years. He spent most of his career at the Committee on House Administration serving six different Committee Chairs. George served as the Committee's Director of Member and Committee Services and concluded his work on Capitol Hill as a Senior Advisor.

In his capacity with the Committee, George was the key advisor in the US House of Representatives on rules and regulations pertaining to using official resources. George provided direct guidance to Committee Chairs, Members and staff of the House leadership, committees, congressional offices, and officers of the House. George also provided briefings to House Members and staff, was responsible for the annual budget authorizations for Members' congressional offices, committee budget authorizations each congress, advised on communications and Franking issues related to using official resources, participated in the operational planning in the wake of the events on 9/11 and Anthrax attacks at the House of Representatives, and was lead staff for putting together the Orientation Educational Program for newly elected Members to the House of Representatives for most of his time on the committee.

Among George's past work on the Committee, he had oversight responsibilities for the Library of Congress, Smithsonian Institution, and Architect of the Capitol. His accomplishments include playing various roles in the transition and reform of the House in 1995 and again in 2011, drafting the Members' Congressional Handbook, Committee Congressional Handbook, and the Guide to Outfitting an Office. He also completed staff level work to shepherd passage of the National Museum of African-American History and Culture, authorize passage of Smithsonian Board of Regents nominees, authorize Smithsonian research facilities, conduct investigative oversight hearings on the National Zoo, participated in preliminary work and planning on the Capitol Visitor Center, and advised visiting foreign government officials on operations of the US House within the Committee's jurisdiction.