

In 2021, Greg Regan was elected President of the Transportation Trades Department, AFL-CIO (TTD). As America's largest transportation labor federation, TTD represents 37 unions and millions of transportation workers across aviation, transit, rail, maritime, construction, manufacturing, and other industries.

Mr. Regan serves as the organization's chief policy strategist, and a leading labor expert on issues related to aviation safety and security. Under Mr. Regan's leadership, TTD advocates for federal policies that will invest in U.S. transportation systems and the workers who keep them moving. He is also a board member of the Jobs to Move America Coalition, Mineta Transportation Institute, and International Transportation Learning Institute.

Prior to being elected TTD President, Mr. Regan served as Secretary-Treasurer and as a Senior Legislative Representative overseeing TTD's work in aviation, passenger rail, and procurement. Before joining TTD, he spent six years working for Congresswoman Louise Slaughter (D-NY). Originally from Rochester, New York, Greg holds a B.A. in Public Policy from Hamilton College.
