

Jason Craig

Jason Craig has been in the transportation and logistics industry and with C.H. Robinson since 1996. His career began in operations on the global forwarding service line, primarily arranging for ocean exports of lumber from Northern Minnesota to Asia. He has managed a variety of operational roles, including network analysis, operational implementation, RFP response and solution design. He has spent time on-site at customers around the country.

In 2006, Mr. Craig created and implemented the government affairs role at C.H. Robinson. His focus is on freight transportation, trade, customs brokerage, and fresh produce issues. He routinely blogs and comments on C.H. Robinson's Transportfolio blog (<https://www.chrobinson.com/blog/>).

Mr. Craig is currently the vice-chair of the Minnesota Freight Advisory Committee and was recently awarded the 2019 William K Smith award from the University of Minnesota's Center for Transportation Studies given "for his leadership and contributions to the education of future leaders in private sector freight transportation." He is an election judge in the City of Minneapolis and a graduate of Carleton College.
