

Garrett Watson is Director of Policy Analysis at the Tax Foundation, where he conducts research and modeling analysis on federal tax policy. His work has been featured in The Washington Post, The Atlantic, Politico, the Associated Press and other major outlets.

Previously, Garrett was a program manager at the R Street Institute and conducted policy research on economic opportunity and labor markets.

Garrett earned a bachelor's degree from St. Lawrence University in upstate New York, where he studied economics and philosophy. Garrett lives in northwest Arkansas with his wife and two children.