

Mark Thibodeau is a lifelong Mainer and resident of Maine's 2nd Congressional district. He is a graduate of Maine Maritime Academy with a degree in Marine Systems Engineering and currently serves as regional manager for ReEnergy Biomass Operations in Maine. He has managed five biomass power generation plants in the state of Maine in the course of his career, as well as five in California. Before joining ReEnergy in 2012, he served as Director of Biomass Operations for Covanta Energy. Prior to that, he was a Field Engineer in General Electric's Energy Services Division, performing major overhauls on steam turbine generators. He holds a 1st Class Stationary Engineers license in Maine.