

Meloni Raney (AIA) is President and CEO of TEXO, The Construction Association, one of the largest construction associations in the country.

After graduating from the University of Oklahoma with a degree in Architecture and minor in Construction Management, Meloni attained her architecture license while working at The Beck Group, a design-build firm headquartered in Dallas.

In 2013, Meloni was hired as Director of Member Programs and Services at TEXO where she leveraged her strengths in educating and building programs for the construction industry. TEXO is the largest commercial contractors association in Texas and the largest association in the United States affiliated with both the national ABC and AGC associations, with members' combined annual revenues of more than $15 billion in the Dallas / Fort Worth region.

In March of 2015, Meloni was promoted to President / CEO of TEXO after the board recognized her successful efforts to grow membership and serve the entire construction industry.

Meloni was awarded 40 Under 40 in the nation for Building Design + Construction's National Magazine Award in 2016 and most recently in 2023 she was recognized as a Construction Dive Up and Coming Leader because of her impact on the construction industry as a young executive.

She is an advocate for women and serves on the Board of Directors for the Young Women's Leadership Academy in Fort Worth, which focuses on STEAM education.