

DAVID B. ALLISON is dean of the School of Public Health and distinguished professor and provost professor at Indiana University, Bloomington. Previously, he was associate dean for research and science in the School of Health Professions at the University of Alabama at Birmingham. Dr. Allison's research interests include obesity and nutrition, quantitative genetics, clinical trials, statistical and research methodology, and research rigor and integrity. He has authored more than 600 scientific publications and edited five books. A member of the National Academy of Medicine of the National Academies, he is also an elected fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, American Statistical Association, American Psychological Association, New York Academy of Medicine, Gerontological Society of America, Academy of Behavioral Medicine Research, and other academic societies. He was inducted into the Johns Hopkins University Society of Scholars in 2013 and has received many awards, including the National Science Foundation-administered and White House Conferred 2006 Presidential Award for Excellence in Science, Mathematics, and Engineering Mentoring; Centrum Award from the American Society of Nutrition; TOPS Research Achievement Award from the Obesity Society; Alabama Academy of Science's Wright A. Gardner Award; U.S. Department of Agriculture's W.O. Atwater Award and Lectureship; and the 2018 American Statistical Association's Statistical Advocate of the Year Award. Professor Allison is known for his commitments to mentoring and diversity in science and rigorous research and unvarnished reporting of research findings.