

Jason Owen-Smith is Executive Director of the Institute for Research on Innovation & Science (IRIS) at the University of Michigan, where he also works as a research data scientist specializing in the application of network science and organizational approaches to the study of science and innovation. Jason is the Principal Investigator of both federal and privately supported scientific research grants, and a founder of national data infrastructure that clarifies the public benefits of university R&D.