

Kate Travis

Managing Editor

Retraction Watch

retractionwatch.com

Science journalist Kate Travis is the managing editor of Retraction Watch, which covers research integrity and misconduct through the lens of published scientific literature. Her own reporting has included coverage of misconduct rulings from the U.S. Office of Research Integrity; major staffing changes at ORI and the National Science Foundation's Office of Inspector General; the exploitation of open datasets by paper mills; the proliferation of AI-generated content in published papers; the ethics of doing research in online forums; and rulings under the False Claims Act.

She has previously served as a director at Science News magazine, an editor of the careers section of the journal Science, and news editor of the Journal of the National Cancer Institute. She has a bachelor's in journalism and master's in science and technology journalism from Texas A&M University.