

Liz Murrill is currently the Solicitor General for the Louisiana Department of Justice, appointed by Attorney General Jeff Landry in early 2016. She is a candidate for Attorney General. She has more than 30 years experience working in state and federal government. She has argued five cases before the United States Supreme Court and has been the lead counsel in hundreds more federal and state cases, both criminal and civil. She is currently lead counsel in over 35 cases challenging federal overreach by the Biden Administration on federal energy, immigration and fiscal policies, Title IX rules, health care and COVID-19 policies, attacks on religious liberty, redistricting litigation, and abortion law challenges. To ensure victims of crimes obtain justice and that convicted criminals are held accountable for their actions, her team has assisted Louisiana District Attorneys across the state in over 250 criminal appeals.

Liz and her husband John, who is also a lawyer, have been married for 30 years and have four sons, the youngest of which is currently attending Louisiana Tech University in Ruston, LA. She obtained her J.D. from LSU Law School in 1991, where she was Editor-in-Chief of the Louisiana Law Review. She also obtained an L.L.M. in Alternative Dispute Resolution from Pepperdine Law School in 2010. Prior to joining the Attorney General's Office, Murrill served as Executive Counsel to Governor Bobby Jindal and the Commissioner of Administration. She was a United States Supreme Court Judicial Fellow in 2007-08 and taught appellate advocacy and legal writing at the LSU Law School for 12 years. She clerked in federal court for U.S. District Judge Frank J. Polozola and a state appeals court for First Circuit Court of Appeal Judge Melvin Shortess.
