Caleb Max is President and CEO of the National Artificial Intelligence Association (NAIA), America's largest business coalition advocating for policies that accelerate AI innovation and ensure American technological dominance. With expertise spanning entrepreneurship, government affairs, and technology policy, Caleb brings strategic insight to positioning the United States as the undisputed leader in artificial intelligence.

Over twelve years, Caleb has founded and scaled multiple successful businesses generating millions in revenue, including a data analytics firm pursuing federal contracts across various agencies. His political experience includes serving as a Congressional intern for Congressman French Hill, managing conservative campaigns, and running for U.S. Congress in 2022.

At George Mason University, where he earned dual degrees in Political Science and Business Administration, Caleb led a nationwide initiative that removed over 100 Chinese Communist Party-funded Confucius Institutes from college campuses, demonstrating his ability to build bipartisan coalitions—a skill he now applies to uniting diverse industries under NAIA's mission.

Through NAIA, Caleb shapes America's AI policy landscape, leveraging his network of policymaker relationships and entrepreneurial insight to ensure the United States wins the AI race while maintaining American values of free speech, innovation, and prosperity.
