

Eric Byington Paint Foreman, YESCO

Biography

Eric Byington is a seasoned professional serving as the Paint Foreman at YESCO Las Vegas, a leading company specializing in custom electric signs, displays, and lighting services. With a career at YESCO spanning since 1991, Byington has become an indispensable member of the team, recognized for his dedication and expertise in the Interiors Department. His role involves overseeing painting operations, ensuring high-quality finishes for YESCO's signage projects, and contributing to the company's reputation for excellence.

Byington gained public recognition through his appearance on Season 7, Episode 5 of CBS's Undercover Boss, which aired on January 15, 2016. During the episode, he trained YESCO Executive Vice President Jeff Young, who was disguised as part of the show's premise. Byington's professionalism and loyalty were highlighted, as was his personal story, including the tragic loss of his son, Riley Scott Byington. As a result of the episode, YESCO committed to honoring Riley's memory by displaying his picture on digital billboards across Utah and Nevada annually on his birthday, January 18, a tradition that has continued for at least eight years.

Praised by YESCO's leadership for his long-term commitment, Byington has also been involved in initiatives to improve workplace morale, such as suggesting team-building activities to restore the company's family-like culture post-recession. His contributions extend beyond technical skills, reflecting his role as a valued leader within YESCO.
