

William Fulton
Vice President of Business Development, Robinson Helicopter Company

Biography

William Fulton is a seasoned professional in the aerospace industry, with over fifteen years of experience supporting product development, sales, and strategy. Will currently serves as the Vice President of Business Development for Robinson Helicopter Company. In his role, Will leads the company's efforts to expand fleet and configured aircraft sales, all while driving significant market growth and profitability.

Before joining Robinson, Will worked as the former head of marketing in North America for Airbus Helicopters and as a manager at Bell Flight. Will has first-hand experience in helicopters and the skies. After graduating from West Point with a degree in mechanical aerospace engineering, Will spent seven years in the U.S. Army flying the Longbow Apache helicopter.