

Anne Peters, MD
Senior Scholar, USC Schaeffer Institute

Anne L. Peters, MD, is a professor of clinical medicine, clinical scholar at the Keck School of Medicine of the University of Southern California. She treats patients in Beverly Hills and in East Los Angeles and has a strong interest in reducing health care disparities for people with diabetes. She has been lead on over 40 grants, has authored over 250 articles and 4 books. Additionally, she was the Chair of the Endocrine Society Technology Guideline Writing Group and has worked on FDA and CDC working groups for diabetes treatments and devices. Dr. Peters can speak to the benefits of preventive care and the complexity of treating chronic diseases such as diabetes.