

Emily Hawes, Pharm.D, (HAAWs)

Emily M. Hawes, PharmD, BCPS, CPP, is a professor in the Department of Family Medicine. She serves as Director of the HRSA-funded Rural Residency Planning and Development and Teaching Health Center Technical Assistance Centers. She also leads the North Carolina Graduate Medical Center – Technical Assistance Center, which aims to expand and sustain rural residencies in the state. She practices as a Clinical Pharmacist Practitioner providing collaborative drug therapy management in a family medicine clinic in rural North Carolina. She was recently appointed to serve on the Board of Directors for the National Resident Matching Program. She is a leader in rural and underserved practice innovation, education, and research that trains residents to serve in rural and community settings.