

Rick Minor

Senior Vice President, Tax and Banking, USCIB

Biography

Rick Minor is a U.S. tax lawyer with a wealth of international tax experience in both the private and public sectors in the United States and the EU. Rick practiced international tax planning at global law firms in offices in Washington, DC, Munich, and London. He then served as the top European-based EMEA tax executive in two U.S. multinational public companies and one European public company, in charge of group tax planning, high value controversy work and negotiations, and tax policy. Between corporate positions in Europe, he served as a fiscal policy advisor to the Finance Ministry of an EU member state. He has published numerous articles on mostly European-related tax policy and practice since the 1990s and is the author of a book on the EU VAT regimes on digital services.

Rick is an active member of the governing Tax Bureau of the BIAC Tax Committee (since 2021), the OECD consumption tax TAG (since 2015), and the Berlin-based Atlantik-Bruecke transatlantic German leadership group (since 2017). He is the founder and chair of two high-level multinational tax policy groups. Rick has his bachelor's degree from Duke University, law degree from UNC-Chapel Hill, and LL.M. in tax law from Georgetown University. He completed work on excise tax policy on a graduate scholarship at the University of Hamburg prior to law school. Rick is fluent in German.
