My name is Sedrick Rowe I am a young farmer from Albany Georgia where I own and operate Rowe organic farms LLC which is a certified farm where I grow organic hemp, canola, watermelon and peanuts. I created a South Georgia Young Farmer Coalition chapter in my community to be able to teach upcoming farmers and beginning farmers the language and policies in the farm bill. I also serve on the agriculture committee board for the Camilla high school, along with the National Board of Young Farmers Coalition. Being a founding member of Georgia Organic Peanut Association (GOPA) where I help start the organic peanut market in Georgia. I am an example to my community by been able to show them that the work can be done and we need more people to be involved in agriculture. I am the first and youngest male organic hemp growing in South Georgia.
