Callie Eideberg
Director, Government Relations
Environmental Defense Fund

Callie's career has been shaped by a passion for rural America, good governance and productive federal policy.

Callie began her career working on political campaigns for federal and state offices. After law school, she transitioned into policy and worked for members of the House of Representatives focused on specialty crops, dairy and invasive species.

In 2012, Callie joined the U.S. Department of Agriculture as a political appointee in the office of congressional relations. She later served as Senior Advisor to the Chief of the Natural Resources Conservation Service. In this role, she implemented the 2014 Farm Bill and crafted new programs to advance on-farm conservation and resilience.

Now at Environmental Defense Fund, Callie focuses her efforts on political and policy strategies that advance sustainable and climate friendly agricultural practices, increase agricultural productivity, and protects the long-term viability and prosperity of rural communities.
