

Chris Brummer (Biography)

Chris Brummer is a Georgetown law professor and writes widely on fintech, financial regulation and global governance. He has lent his expertise to policymakers, founders, businesses, and nonprofits around the world grappling with some of the most challenging puzzles facing innovation, regulation, and inclusion. Chris graduated summa cum laude from Washington University in St. Louis, earned a Ph.D from the University of Chicago and graduated from law school with honors from Columbia.

Chris most recently served as a member of the Biden-Harris Presidential Transition Team from October 2020 to January 2021, where his work focused on financial regulation and financial technology, systemic risk, and racial equity. Prior to that, he served as a member of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) Subcommittee on Virtual Currencies, as a member of the Financial Innovation Standing Committee of the European Securities and Markets Authority (ESMA) Consultative Working Group, and as a member of FINRA's National Adjudicatory Council, and as a panelist of Nasdaq delistings.

A frequent speaker and lecturer, Chris was asked to deliver the keynote speech for the SEC's Black History celebration in 2021, and the keynote speech for FinCEN's Black History celebration in 2022.
