

Jeromy Sullivan, an enrolled member of the Port Gamble S'Klallam Tribe, has served as an elected official of the Tribal Council for nearly a decade - as Tribal Chair since 2010 and as Councilman for four years. Prior to his years as Councilman, Jeromy worked as Information Technology Manager for the Tribe. He has been a Commercial Geoduck Harvester for 19 years. Jeromy tends to focus on Natural Resource issues for the Tribe, as well as Economic Development along with the many other issues the Tribe faces on a daily basis. Jeromy and his wife, Toni, along with their two children, live in Little Boston.