Amendment to H.R. 4909
National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year
2017

Offered by: Ms. Duckworth of Illinois

Retaining Critical Skills and STEM Capabilities During Headquarters Downsizing

The committee notes that the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2016 (Public Law 114-12) directed the Secretary of Defense to achieve not less than a 25 percent reduction in headquarters, administrative, and support activities of the Department of Defense during the period beginning with fiscal year 2015 and ending with fiscal year 2019. The committee remains concerned that these cuts may result in the loss of critical capabilities across the Department of Defense and military services, particularly in the science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) competencies. As demonstrated by section 1105 of this Act, the committee has made clear its intention that the Department of Defense and the military services recruit, hire, and retain the Nation's top scientific and engineering talent. It would, therefore, be imprudent for the military services and the Department to achieve headquarters, administrative, and support activities reductions by reducing the number of STEM employees just because their workplace resides within a headquarters function.

Public Law 114-12 requires the Secretary, as part of the annual budget submission for the Department of Defense, to include a report describing and assessing the progress of the Department in implementing the headquarters reduction plan for fiscal years 2017, 2018, and 2019. As part of this reporting requirement, the committee directs the Secretary of Defense to include a detailed assessment on the downsizing of employees, including through attrition, by component or military service that are considered STEM employees, and the operational impact on the Department of Defense or military service of that loss.

Further, as the committee has stated in past House reports, any reduction in personnel should not be implemented as an across-the-board cut, but rather should be strategically designed to retain critical functions, capabilities, and skillsets—including, but not limited to the depots, the arsenals, the ammunition plants and the acquisition workforce—and to eliminate unnecessary or redundant functions or skillsets that do not benefit or support mission requirements.

The committee directs the Secretary of Defense and the Service Secretaries of each of the military services to provide a report to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives not later than February 15 of calendar years 2017, 2018, and 2019 on any depot, arsenal, or ammunition plant position that has been reduced as a result of headquarters downsizing. The report should include the position description, critical skills required for that position, and justification for the reduction. The report should also provide details on any gaps in compliance with section 2464 of title 10, United States Code, at the facility from which a position was cut or gaps in critical skill sets at an arsenal.

National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2017

In the portion of the report to accompany H.R. 4909 titled "Recommendations of the National Commission on the Future of the Army", insert after "... and increasing armored brigade combat team capacity in the Army.", the following new text: "The committee is also supportive of the recommendations for developing one Army under the total force policy."

Amendment to H.R. 4909 National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2017

Offered by: Mr. Forbes

In the appropriate place in the report to accompany H.R. 4909, insert the following new Directive Report Language:

JLENS Redeployment

The committee is aware that on March 19, 2015, the Commander of U.S. Northern Command (NORTHCOM) testified at the House Armed Services Subcommittee on Strategic Forces that, “Russia is progressing toward its goal of deploying long-range, conventionally-armed cruise missiles with ever increasing stand-off launch distances on its heavy bombers, submarines, and surface combatants, augmenting the Kremlin’s toolkit of flexible deterrent options short of the nuclear threshold” and that “[s]hould these trends continue, over time NORAD will face increased risk in our ability to defend North America against Russian cruise missile threats.”

The committee is also aware that the Commander testified on April 14, 2016 that, “[w]e are in the first segment of our three-phase Homeland Defense Design (HDD) effort, which will improve our capability to find, fix, track, target, and engage growing air threats, such as those posed by cruise missiles, low-slow aircraft, and long-range aviation. In this first phase, we are testing and evaluating advanced sensors as well as integrated command and control capabilities. In addition to the new Stateside Affordable Radar System (STARS), we had begun a three-year operational exercise of the Joint Land Attack Cruise Missile Defense Elevated Netted Sensor System (JLENS).”

The committee notes the U.S. Army terminated procurement of JLENS in 2011. The committee does not support restarting this program of record. However, the committee notes that the research, development, testing, and evaluation of JLENS resulted in the acquisition of two JLENS systems consisting of two aerostats per system. The exercise supported by the Commander of NORTHCOM is therefore only using equipment that the United States already owns.

The committee believes the defense of the national capital region and the mid-Atlantic region, as part of the broader defense of the homeland, is critical to national security in view of the emerging threats posed by Russia and other states.

Therefore, the committee directs the Commander of U.S. Northern Command, and any appropriate Department of Defense officials, to provide a report to the congressional defense committees on his recommendations for the optimal manner to complete the first phase of the Homeland Defense Design effort. Such report should include the following elements:

- 1) The ideal location to which existing JLENS systems could be deployed for the defense of the National Capitol and mid-Atlantic region, and a schedule and detailed estimate of the costs to relocate the system to that location;
- 2) Any issues, including airspace closures, that would have to be coordinated with other U.S. government agencies, and a plan to do so, as part of the relocation of JLENS (noting its direction in House Committee Report 113-446, which accompanied H.R. 4435, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2015);
- 3) An assessment of the impact to the Homeland Defense Design of a failure to complete the first phase, including the operational exercise involving JLENS.

The committee notes that it has recommended continuing funding for JLENS operations to support the relocation of JLENS to another site in the Act that this report accompanies.
