

David Albright, President of the Institute for Science and International Security

David Albright, a physicist, is founder and President of the non-profit Institute for Science and International Security in Washington, D.C. He directs the project work of the Institute, heads its fundraising efforts, and chairs its board of directors. In addition, he regularly publishes and conducts scientific research. He has written numerous assessments on secret nuclear weapons programs throughout the world. During his career, Albright has testified numerous times on nuclear issues before the U.S. Congress. He has spoken to many groups, technical workshops and conferences, briefed government decision-makers, and trained many government officials in non-proliferation policy making. The media frequently cite Albright, and he has appeared often on television and radio. Albright has co-authored five books, including the most recent Revisiting South Africa's Nuclear Weapons Program and 2010's Peddling Peril: How the Secret Nuclear Trade Arms America's Enemies, listed by The Atlantic as one of the best foreign affairs books of 2010.
