a. The Belfer Center has a contract with Foreign Policy Magazine to support "peace game" simulations. These Foreign Policy Magazine simulations were underwritten by the UAE Embassy in Washington DC. I gave two lectures and participated in several events the week of October 30, 2017 at the Emirates Diplomatic Academy about cybersecurity, which featured aspiring student-diplomats from around the world representing different countries, similar to Model United Nations. Expenses covered include roundtrip airfare (approx. $6000 USD if booked directly), accommodations for four nights (approx. $150 USD per night), airport transfers and meals (approx. $400 USD). In addition, the Cyber Security Project received $5,000 from the overall Belfer Center-Foreign Policy Magazine contract.

b. Conferences often cover expenses for speakers, and organizations that host conferences abroad may receive money from foreign governments to support the conference and pay such expenses. I would be happy to provide the committee as much detail as possible at its request as to the conferences I attended since January 1, 2013, but to best of my recollection, my expenses were at least partially reimbursed or covered by money likely originating with a foreign government for attending a conference related to the subject of the hearing at the following:

i. World Government Summit, UAE (February 2016). Expenses covered include roundtrip airfare (approx. $6000 USD if booked directly), accommodation for three nights (approx. $250 USD per night), airport transfers and meals (approx. $400 USD).

ii. CyCon, Cooperative Cyber Defence Centre of Excellence, Estonia/NATO (May/June 2016). Reimbursed airfare (approx. $1500 USD). Expenses covered include accommodation for four nights (approx. $150 USD per night), airport transfers and meals (approx. $400 USD).

iii. Cybersecurity Workshop, Beijing, co-hosted by the Center for Strategic and International Studies and China Institutes of Contemporary International Relations (January 2017). Expenses covered include accommodation for two nights (approx. $60 USD per night) and meals (approx. $100 USD).

iv. Oxford Cyber Security Workshop/NATO (June 2017). Reimbursed airfare (approx. $2000 USD). Expenses covered include accommodation for two nights (approx. $150 USD per night), and meals (approx. $100).
