

Linda Robinson was a senior policy researcher and the Director of the Center for Middle East Public Policy at the RAND Corporation until September 2022. Her research and journalism have taken her around the world, including extensive sojourns in the Middle East and South Asia. She has testified multiple times before Congress on the Middle East, special operations, and U.S. successes and failures in the “long wars.” Her research at RAND received five awards. Among other RAND Reports, she co-authored *Rethinking U.S. Strategy in the Middle East: Sustainable Partnerships, Strategic Investments* (2021), *Making Victory Count After Defeating ISIS: Stabilization Challenges in Mosul and Beyond* (2017); *Finding the Right Balance: Department of Defense Roles in Stabilization* (2018); *Modern Political Warfare* (2018); *Assessment of the Politico-Military Campaign to Counter ISIL and Options for Adaptation* (2016); and *Improving Strategic Competence: Lessons from 13 Years of War* (2014). She is the author of critically acclaimed and best-selling books on Iraq (Tell Me How This Ends, 2008), Afghanistan (One Hundred Victories, 2013), and special operations (Masters of Chaos, 2004).

Before joining RAND in 2013, Linda was a fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations, the Wilson Center, the International Institute for Strategic Studies, the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies, and the Nieman Foundation for Journalism at Harvard University. She was a foreign correspondent for U.S. News and World Report and Senior Editor of Foreign Affairs magazine. Linda served on the advisory boards of the National Defense University and the Army War College. As chair of the latter board, she received the Outstanding Civilian Service award for her contributions to professional military education.