

Dr. J. Peter Pham
Director, Africa Center

Dr. J. Peter Pham is the Director of the Africa Center at the Atlantic Council in Washington, DC.

Dr. Pham was previously Senior Vice President of the National Committee on American Foreign Policy in New York City, and editor of its bimonthly journal, American Foreign Policy Interests. He was also a tenured associate professor of Justice Studies, Political Science, and Africana Studies at James Madison University in Harrisonburg, Virginia, where he was director of the Nelson Institute for International and Public Affairs. He also served on the inaugural Senior Advisory Group of the U.S. Africa Command (AFRICOM).

The author of over 300 essays and reviews and the author, editor, or translator of over a dozen books, Dr. Pham also contributes regularly to a number of online publications and frequently appears as a commentator on broadcast and print media outlets.

He is the incumbent vice president of the Association for the Study of the Middle East and Africa (ASMEA), an academic organization which represents over 1,300 scholars of Middle Eastern and African Studies at more than 300 colleges and universities in the United States and other countries, and editor-in-chief of ASMEA's Journal of the Middle East and Africa, published by Taylor and Francis.

Dr. Pham was the winner of the 2008 Nelson Mandela International Prize for African Security and Development, an award jointly presented by the Royal United Services Institute (RUSI) for Defence and Security Studies, the Brenthurst Foundation, and the Nelson Mandela Foundation.