

Chipo Dendere is a Zimbabwean political scientist. Dr. Dendere is currently Consortium for Faculty Diversity Fellow and Visiting Assistant Professor of Political Science classes at Amherst College. Dr. Dendere's research expertise is on democracy, elections, and, migration, with a regional interest in African politics. She writes about the impact of voter exit, migration and remittances on the survival of authoritarian regimes. Her new research is on the role of technology and social media in new democracies.