

Walter Kerr

Walter Kerr is the co-founding executive director of Unlock Aid, a global coalition of next-generation innovators building solutions for challenges like pandemic response, food security and healthcare accessibility. Its members span North America, Europe, Africa, Asia, and Latin America. Unlock Aid's mission is to unlock the power and potential of our public institutions to source and scale solutions for our world's most challenging problems.

Prior to Unlock Aid, Walter worked at the Global Fund to Defeat Aids, Tuberculosis and Malaria. He also has past work experience with the health technology startup Zenysis Technologies and with the US State Department, including as a Foreign Service Officer, where he served overseas assignments in China and Brazil.

Recent publications relevant to this hearing topic include:

- America's Foreign Aid Is Shackled by Budgetary Obligations, coauthored with Amanda Arch, Foreign Policy, June 16, 2022: <https://foreignpolicy.com/2022/06/16/america-foreign-aid-shackled-budgetary-obligations/>
- USAID's Big Contracts Don't Pay Off, coauthored with Maya Guzdar, Foreign Policy, May 18, 2021: <https://jia.sipa.columbia.edu/online-articles/innovating-america-again>
- Unlocking Innovation for 21st Century Challenges, coauthored with Maya Guzdar and Macon Phillips, May 25, 2022: <https://unlockaid.org/wp-content/uploads/sites/131/Unlocking-Innovation-21st-Century-Public.pdf>
- Innovating in America Again, Columbia University Journal of International Affairs, July 16, 2020: <https://jia.sipa.columbia.edu/online-articles/innovating-america-again>
- Latin America Can't Survive the Coronavirus Alone, Foreign Policy, August 3, 2020: <https://foreignpolicy.com/2020/08/03/latin-america-coronavirus-aid-covid-assistance/>