Senior Fellow, Center For Cyber and Homeland Security, The George Washington University

Clint Watts is a Robert Fox Fellow for the Foreign Policy Research Institute, a Senior Fellow at the Center for Cyber and Homeland Security at the George Washington University. Clint's current research and writing focuses on the battle between the Islamic State and al Qaeda for primacy over global jihadi militancy. His upcoming research examines future terrorism and the resulting implications as the Islamic State declines in Syria and Iraq.

As a consultant, Clint designs and implements customized training and research programs for military, intelligence and law enforcement organizations at the federal, state and local level. In recent years, he's supported private sector banking organizations develop best practices in cybersecurity intelligence operations.

Before becoming a consultant, Clint served as a U.S. Army infantry officer, a FBI Special Agent on a Joint Terrorism Task Force, as the Executive Officer of the Combating Terrorism Center at West Point (CTC) and as a consultant to the FBI's Counter Terrorism Division (CTD).

His articles and policy recommendations have been published by Foreign Affairs, Foreign Policy, Politico, Lawfare, World Politics Review, the Brookings Institution, War On The Rocks, the Combating Terrorism Center and the Foreign Policy Research Institute. His commentary has been broadcast at CNN, C-SPAN, al Jazeera America and International, BBC World and America, ABC Nightly News, MSNBC and NPR.
