

Paul C. Worley - Biography

Paul C. Worley is Rail Division Director at NCDOT and leads a multi-faceted modal division that is key to North Carolina's transportation, economic development and job creation needs through providing customer services, building infrastructure, and improving safety.

Duties of the Rail Division include state-supported passenger service operations and facilities, rail freight and passenger planning and project development, administration of rail freight and industrial access programs, rail-highway at-grade crossing safety improvements, safety oversight programs, and the design and construction of rail freight and passenger track projects to improve speed, capacity, and efficiency.

As director, Paul leads North Carolina's Piedmont Improvement Program – an ongoing, multi-million dollar series of projects making incremental track, facility and equipment improvements to enable improved safety, and additional capacity on the North Carolina Railroad Company corridor between Raleigh and Charlotte. Serving on numerous national transportation and rail committees, Paul is a graduate of Campbell University and has almost 26 years of experience with NCDOT.
