

THE CORNER

POLITICS & POLICY

Poll: Strong Majority of Americans Back the Hyde Amendment

By JOHN MCCORMACK | January 29, 2021 3:47 PM

A pro-life demonstrator holds up a mock human fetus, as groups chant over one another outside of the U.S. Supreme Court on Capitol Hill in Washington, March 4, 2020. (Tom Brenner/Reuters)

Listen to this article

A new Marist Poll sponsored by the Knights of Columbus asks Americans: “Please tell me if you strongly support, support, oppose, or strongly oppose using tax dollars to pay for a woman’s abortion.” Fifty-eight percent of Americans say they oppose taxpayer funding of abortion, while 38 percent support it. Those numbers are broadly consistent with polling on the Hyde amendment in recent years. In 2016, a Politico/Harvard poll found that likely voters oppose Medicaid funding of abortion by a 22-point margin — 58 percent to 36 percent.

President Biden this week rescinded the Mexico City Policy, so groups that perform or promote abortion overseas can once again receive funding for contraceptive programs from U.S. taxpayers. Pro-life Americans have long opposed the use of taxpayer dollars that subsidize abortionists, but keeping the Hyde amendment has been an even greater priority because direct funding of abortion procedures has greater impact on the number of lives lost to abortion:

Protecting conscience rights is indeed a weighty reason to support the Hyde amendment, but there is an even better reason to do so. What makes it the most important pro-life public policy since the Supreme Court's 1973 Roe v. Wade decision is this: When you subsidize something, you get more of it, and this basic fact of social science holds true when that something is abortion.

One study by the Guttmacher Institute, a Planned Parenthood offshoot, found that in states that use their own tax dollars to pay for abortions undergone by Medicaid recipients, the abortion rate among Medicaid recipients is 3.9 times the rate among nonrecipients, “while in states that do not permit Medicaid funding for abortions, Medicaid recipients are only 1.6 times as likely as nonrecipients to have abortions.”

The precise number of lives saved by the Hyde amendment is a matter of dispute, but according to a 2016 report by the Charlotte Lozier Institute, an organization affiliated with the pro-life Susan B. Anthony List, “the best research indicates that the Hyde Amendment has saved over two million unborn children” since the policy was first enacted in 1976.

That’s an average of 50,000 human lives saved from abortion each year.

Ruth Bader Ginsburg acknowledged in a 2009 interview that a major rationale for funding abortions for Medicaid recipients was that it would result in a culling of the poor, though she put it a bit more euphemistically. “Frankly, I had thought that at the time Roe was decided, there was concern about population growth and particularly growth in populations that we don’t want to have too many of,” she said. “So that Roe was going to be then set up for Medicaid funding of abortion.” For that reason, the liberal Supreme Court justice said she was surprised that the Supreme Court did not strike down the Hyde amendment in the 1980 case Harris v. McRae.

While the House appropriations chair is pushing forward to scrap the Hyde amendment in 2021, one former pro-life Democratic congressman, Dan Lipinski of Illinois, is doubtful Speaker Pelosi has the votes in the narrowly divided House to kill the pro-life policy.

In the Senate, two Democrats have committed to keeping the 60-vote threshold for legislation, including spending bills that fund Medicaid. But it remains to be seen whether a simple majority of Senate Democrats, under complex budget reconciliation rules, will find a way to fund abortion. West Virginia Democratic senator Joe Manchin told NATIONAL REVIEW in December that killing “the Hyde amendment would be foolish and I’m strongly opposed to this push from some Members of Congress,” but Manchin hasn’t commented on whether he supports a “public option” for health insurance that would cover elective abortion.

RETURN TO THE CORNER

JOHN MCCORMACK is the Washington correspondent for NATIONAL REVIEW and a fellow at the National Review Institute. @mccormackjohn

AROUND THE WEB

revcontent.

Ringing in the Ears? Simple Method "Ends" Tinnitus (Try This Tonight)

TRENDINGNEWS

The Award Winning Gut Solution

HEALTHY GUT

17 Iconic NFL Players Who Lost It All

MONEYWISE.COM

Read More

District of Columbia Launches New Guidelines for Cars Used Less Than 50 Miles/day

BINDRIGHT

RECOMMENDED

Australians Are Suffering from Excessive COVID Lockdowns

GIDEON ROZNER

The Biden Illusion Crumbles to Dust

JIM GERAGHTY

The Real Biden Presidency Emerges

RICH LOWRY

The Taliban ‘Cut Off the Heads of Two Boys Who Were Nine and Ten’

JIM GERAGHTY

Why Isn’t the Attack on Larry Elder the Biggest Story in America?

KYLE SMITH

Democrats Finally Get Comfortable Saying Obama Is a Jerk

JIM GERAGHTY

YOU MAY ALSO LIKE

Powered by ZergNet

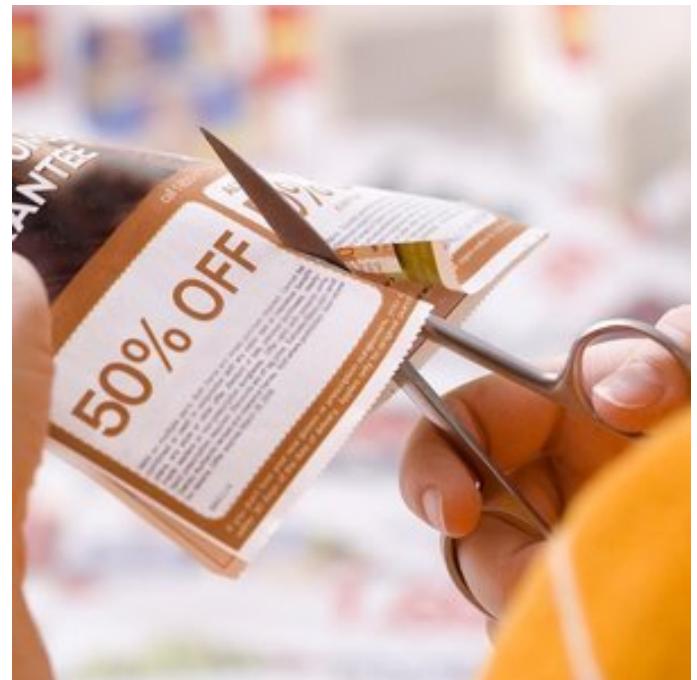

White House Press Sec. Reveals The Reason She's Stepping Down

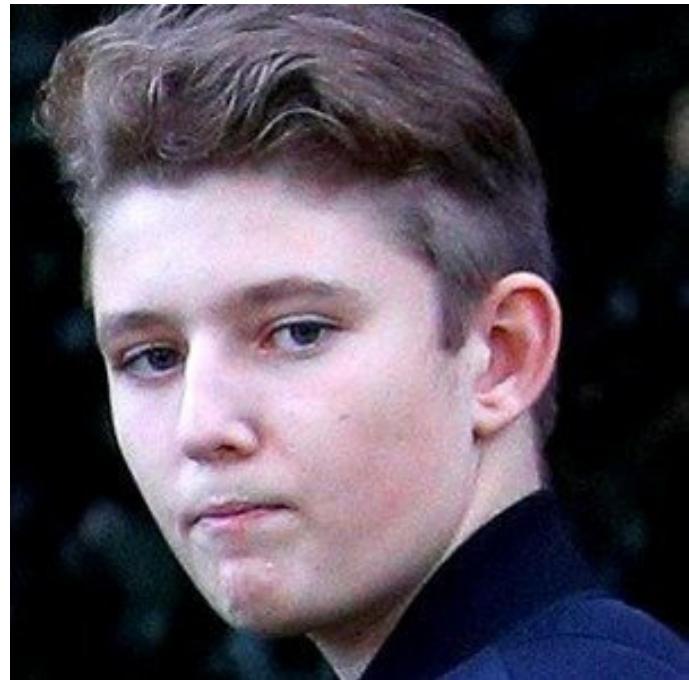

This Awkward Fox News Host Exchange Is Raising Some Eyebrows

Science Reveals What Women Find Most Physically Attractive

How You Can Start Extreme Couponing

The Truth About Sasha Obama Is Out in the Open

This Is Barron Trump's Life Now Since Leaving The White House

THE LATEST

Norm Macdonald, R.I.P.

DANIEL TENREIRO

Conservative Watchdog Files Ethics Complaint against AOC over Met Gala Attendance

BRITTANY BERNSTEIN

New York Times
Quietly Retracts
Claim That Hunter
Biden Laptop Story
Is 'Unsubstantiated'

ISAAC SCHORR

Revenue and Revenge

THE EDITORS

The Rich Already Pay Too Much in Taxes

DAVID HARSANYI

Missouri Superintendent
Cancels Advanced
Middle School
Courses over
'Equity Issues'

NR STAFF