

Andrew deLaski

adelaski@standardsASAP.org
Appliance Standards Awareness Project
45 Bradfield Ave.
Boston, MA 02131
617-390-5334

Education. University of Virginia. B.A., Economics, 1988
University of Michigan. Masters of Public Policy, 1995

Related

Experience Appliance Standards Awareness Project, Boston MA
Executive Director, 1999-present

Work to advance cost-effective energy and water efficiency standards at both the federal and state level on behalf of a diverse coalition of pro-efficiency interests.

Consortium for Energy Efficiency, Boston MA
Product Manager, 1995-1998

Developed initiatives designed to transform markets for targeted product categories to higher levels of efficiency.

Select Publications

“Jobs Created by Appliance Standards” with B. Stickles, J. Mauer, and J. Barrett. 2018

“Energy Saving States of America” with J. Mauer. 2017

“Next Generation Standards: How the National Energy Efficiency Standards Program Can Continue to Drive Energy Economic and Environmental Benefits” with J. Mauer, J. Amann, M. McGaraghan, B. Kundu, S. Kwatra and J. McMahon. 2016.

“Better Appliances: An Analysis of Performance, Features and Prices as Efficiency Has Improved” with J. Mauer, S. Nadel, A. Fryer and R. Young. 2013.

“The Efficiency Boom: Cashing in on the Savings from Appliance Standards” with A. Lowenberger, J. Mauer, M. DiMascio, J. Amann, and S. Nadel. ASAP and ACEEE. 2012.

Appliance and Equipment Efficiency Standards: A Money Maker and Job Creator” with R. Gold, S. Nadel, and J. “Skip” Laitner. ASAP and ACEEE. 2011.

“Appliance and Equipment Standards in the U.S.: Lessons Learned from Two Decades of Successful Negotiations” with S. Nadel. ECEEE proceedings. 2011.