Congresswoman Jaime Herrera Beutler was first elected to Congress at the age of 31 to represent Southwest Washington's 3rd District. Jaime is the first Hispanic in history to represent Washington state in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Jaime is one of the few young mothers currently serving in the U.S. Congress. Jaime's personal experience as a mother inspired her to cofound the bi-partisan Maternity Care Caucus, which focuses on legislation and policies to improve the lives of mothers and babies.

A member of the U.S. House Appropriations Committee, Jaime has developed a record of working productively with both Republicans and Democrats on important issues.

Jaime, her husband Dan, and their children, Abigail and Ethan, live in Battle Ground, Washington.
