

Jason Levine is the Executive Director of the Center for Auto Safety and is a consumer protection advocate and attorney.

In this role Mr. Levine is regularly called on to promote vehicle safety on behalf of consumers. He frequently appears on national and local media outlets, including Good Morning America, The Today Show, CBS Evening News, CNN, CNBC, NPR, The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, The Detroit Free Press, and The Los Angeles Times. He has published opinion pieces in The Washington Post, USA Today, The Detroit News, The Hill, Axios, The Baltimore Sun, and The Orlando Sentinel. He has testified before the U.S. Congress and in state legislatures.

Prior to joining the Center for Auto Safety, Jason served in leadership positions at four federal agencies across two Presidential administrations. His last role was as the Director of the Office of Congressional, Legislative, and Intergovernmental Affairs at the U.S. Office of Personnel Management. Previously, he served in a variety of management and policy roles at the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, including Chief of Staff and Chief Counsel to the Vice Chairman. He also served in an advisory capacity to the Assistant Secretary for Aging at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Mr. Levine began his work in federal government as Chief Counsel to one of the Commissioners of the Federal Election Commission. Before joining public service, he worked as an attorney in private practice in Washington, DC.

Jason has long been involved in his community, both close to home and nationally. Currently, he serves as a board member of Advocates for Highway and Auto Safety as well as the Canadian Automobile Protection Association. On the local level, he served seven years on the Board of Directors for the Washington, DC Chapter of the Crohn's and Colitis Foundation, fulfilled a term each as Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Montgomery County, Maryland Advisory Committee on Consumer Protection; and as a Commissioner of the Montgomery County, Maryland Commission on Health.

Mr. Levine is a graduate of the University of Connecticut School of Law, with honors, and received a Bachelor of Science degree from Northwestern University. He and his wife, Carin, live with their two school-aged children in Bethesda, Maryland.