

Trista Hamsmith currently lives in Lubbock with her family. She is a founder of Reese's Purpose, a non-profit with the goal of protecting children from hidden dangers and threats to their safety. Her primary focus is to raise awareness of the dangers of button batteries and to advocate for legislative action to prevent other families from suffering due to accidental button battery ingestion.