

Nathaniel Gleicher, the Head of Security Policy at Facebook, works at the intersection of technology, policy, and law. In that role, he brings Facebook's security, policy, and legal teams together to ensure a unified front against election interference and information operations. Nathaniel is trained as a computer scientist and a lawyer. Prior to joining Facebook, he taught computer programming, built and secured computer networks, prosecuted cybercrime at the U.S. Department of Justice, and served as Director for Cybersecurity Policy at the National Security Council.