

Caryn Devins Strickland earned her B.A., with highest distinction, from the University of Vermont, and her J.D., magna cum laude, Order of the Coif, from Duke University School of Law. After law school, Ms. Strickland served as a judicial law clerk for a state supreme court chief justice, a federal district judge, and a circuit judge on the Second Circuit Court of Appeals. She was then selected for a prestigious Supreme Court Fellowship in a placement at the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts. After her fellowship, she worked as an assistant federal public defender. She now serves indigent criminal defense clients in private practice.