

Rick Masters is Special Counsel to the National Center for Interstate Compacts (‘NCIC’), affiliated with the Council of State Governments (‘CSG’), providing legal guidance on the law and use of interstate compacts, their application and enforcement and bill drafting guidance in conjunction with the various NCIC compact projects. He has been a primary drafter of many compacts including multistate licensure compacts for the professions of Nursing, Medicine, Physical Therapy, Emergency Medical Services and Psychology. He also provides legal advice to a variety of compact governing boards and agencies and testifies before state legislatures about compact legislation as well as testimony to the U.S. Congress. Rick provided guidance to the Federal Trade Commission concerning the use of interstate compacts as a means of streamlining occupational licensing across state lines at the FTC’s Economic Liberty Task Force Roundtable. His comments and published work on interstate compacts were relied upon in the FTC White Paper “Options to Enhance Occupational License Portability” published in September 2018. He is also a member of the panel of experts to the U.S. Department of Labor’s Occupational Licensure Learning Consortium in a three (3) year project to: 1) ensure existing and new licensing requirements don’t create unnecessary barriers to employment and 2) improve license portability for occupations across state lines. Rick continues to engage in extensive research and writing in the field of interstate compacts including co-authoring the largest compilation of laws and commentary on the subject published by the American Bar Association in 2016 entitled The Evolving Law and Use of Interstate Compacts 2nd Edition. He received his Juris Doctorate from the Brandeis School of Law of the University of Louisville and served as a Kentucky Assistant Attorney General after which he was General Counsel to CSG. He also served a four (4) year term as a member of the Kentucky Executive Branch Ethics Commission.
