

Joe Maxwell is a co-founder of Farm Action. He focuses his work on a vision of an inclusive U.S. economy that works for all people, providing them an equitable opportunity to share in the prosperity they help build, rather than an economy that works for just a handful of individuals and multi-national corporations.

With degrees in agriculture economics and law from the University of Missouri, Joe has spent over 30 years in policy development and advocacy, and has experience developing food supply chains within the differentiated protein markets. Joe and his brother Steve are Missouri hog farmers, giving him firsthand knowledge of the growth of concentration in food and agriculture and its consequences.

Joe served as a Missouri state legislator and as Missouri's Lieutenant Governor, and is retired from the Army National Guard, where he served as a First Sergeant in the Field Artillery. Joe's work has been profiled by The Hill, Huffington Post, Mother Jones, Politico, and The Nation. He has been cited by CNN, The New York Times, NPR, USA Today, Washington Post, and more.
