

(Short)

An advocate for human rights and racial justice for nearly three decades, Margaret Huang is the President and CEO of the Southern Poverty Law Center, which serves as a catalyst for racial justice in the U.S. South and beyond. Throughout her career, Margaret has championed social justice and human dignity, advocating an end to discrimination and oppression in all of its forms. Prior to the Southern Poverty Law Center, Margaret served as the Executive Director of Amnesty International USA, where she was responsible for leading campaigns to protect the human rights of migrants and refugees, torture survivors, gun violence victims, and activists and protestors across the globe. Ms. Huang received a Master of International Affairs from Columbia University, and a B.S.F.S. from Georgetown University.

(Long)

Margaret Huang, an advocate for human rights and racial justice for nearly three decades, is the President and CEO of the Southern Poverty Law Center. The SPLC serves as a catalyst for racial justice in the U.S. South and beyond, working in partnership with communities to dismantle white supremacy, strengthen intersectional movements, and advance the human rights of all people. With offices in five states in the Deep South, SPLC's litigation, advocacy, education, and research work to eradicate poverty, reduce incarceration, protect voting rights, and disrupt white nationalism.

Throughout her career, Margaret has championed social justice and human dignity, advocating against discrimination and oppression in all of its forms. Prior to the Southern Poverty Law Center, Margaret served as the Executive Director of Amnesty International USA, where she was responsible for leading campaigns to protect the human rights of migrants and refugees, torture survivors, gun violence victims, and activists and protestors across the globe. Under her leadership, the organization developed a number of new initiatives on innovation and learning; inclusion, diversity, equity and accessibility; and monitoring and evaluation, while growing organizational financial resources by more than fifty percent over four years. Margaret has given testimony before the U.S. Congress, the United Nations human rights bodies, and the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights. She currently sits on the Board of Directors for the Progressive Multiplier Fund, which works to strengthen and sustain the progressive movement by enabling philanthropy to invest in the financial independence of movement organizations.

Margaret previously served as the Executive Director of the Rights Working Group, a coalition focused on protecting human rights and civil liberties of vulnerable communities in the post-September 11 era. Other experience includes working at Global Rights, the Robert F. Kennedy Center for Human Rights, The Asia Foundation, and the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Ms. Huang received a Master of International Affairs from Columbia University, and a B.S.F.S. from Georgetown University.