

Bio of Matthew Fiedler

Matthew Fiedler is a senior fellow with the Brookings Schaeffer Initiative on Health Policy. His research examines a range of topics in health care economics and health care policy. Prior to joining the Brookings Institution in January 2017, Fiedler served as Chief Economist on the staff the Council of Economic Advisers, where he oversaw the Council's work on health care policy, including implementation of the Affordable Care Act's health insurance and health care payment reforms. Fiedler holds a Ph.D. in economics from Harvard University and a B.A. in mathematics and economics from Swarthmore College.