

Dr. Cynthia Miller-Idriss is a professor in the schools of Public Affairs and Education at the American University in Washington, DC, where she directs the Polarization and Extremism Research and Innovation Lab (PERIL) in the Center for University Excellence (CUE). Dr. Miller-Idriss has testified before the U.S. Congress and regularly briefs policy, security, education and intelligence agencies in the U.S., the United Nations, and other countries on trends in domestic violent extremism and strategies for prevention and disengagement. She is the author, co-author, or co-editor of six books, including Hate in the Homeland: The New Global Far Right, published by Princeton University Press in October 2020. In addition to her academic work, Miller-Idriss writes frequently for mainstream audiences, both as an opinion columnist at MSNBC and in other recent by-lines in Foreign Affairs, The Washington Post, The New York Times, The Boston Globe, CNN, The Hill, Politico, The Guardian, Le Monde, Salon, and more. She appears regularly in the media as an expert source and political commentator, including regular appearances on major news outlets globally, including regular appearances on CNN, MSNBC, PBS News Hour, BBC World News, Deutsche Welle, France 24, al Jazeera, and more. She joined American University's faculty in 2013 after spending a decade on the faculty at NYU. Dr. Miller-Idriss holds a PhD in Sociology and an M.P.P. in Public Policy from the University of Michigan, and a bachelor's degree (magna cum laude) from Cornell University.